Dear Colleague,

Pat Parenteau and I are writing to invite you to participate in an invitation-only webinar to discuss the status of nuisance lawsuits filed against oil companies for climate change-related damages. There is significant media, public, and student interest in the lawsuits and we thought you might find the opportunity to learn more about them helpful.

The webinar will include the lead lawyers for several of the suits, who will discuss the novel legal theories behind the cases, why they are different from earlier attempts to hold fossil fuel companies accountable for climate change damages, what's next in the process, and how the industry and its many surrogates are attacking the cases and the communities. We have both heard the lawyers discuss the cases and have found them very informative and interesting. There are a number of reasons why these cases appear to stand a much better chance of success than the earlier round of nuisance lawsuits that were all dismissed. The lawyers will discuss in detail the bases for the cases.

To remind you of the background, in July 2017, three California coastal communities – Marin County, San Mateo County, and the City of Imperial Beach – filed lawsuits in state court against 36 of the largest oil, gas, and coal companies in the world. San Francisco and Oakland filed similar lawsuits in September. Santa Cruz County, New York City, and the cities of Santa Cruz and Richmond subsequently followed did as well. Boulder City and County and San Miguel County have now also joined in suing the oil companies.

While there are differences among the cases, they share a common theme: holding fossil fuel companies accountable for costs and damages they are incurring to plan for, mitigate, and adapt to rising seas and other consequences of climate change.

Yet, for the time being at least, the cases are proceeding on separate tracks: while all of the California cases were filed in state court raising only state common law claims, they were removed by defendants to federal court. US District Judge William Alsup recently rejected a remand motion saying the San Francisco and Oakland cases belong in federal court under federal common law. However, US District Judge Vincent Chhabria subsequently ordered the Marin, San Mateo, and Imperial Beach cases back to state court because, he said, federal common law does not apply.

Meanwhile, Exxon has launched a counterattack by threatening a lawsuit in Texas raising allegations of potential bond fraud against several of the cities and counties who dared to sue them in California.

The webinar, which Pat Parenteau and I are co-hosting, should be informative and interesting and address a number of important issues. You will also have an opportunity to ask questions of the lawyers.

Hi Mark,

We have gone a different direction and now plan to host Friday's Webinar with GoToMeetings. Have you used this service before? If not, would you be available to schedule a short test session with me either today or tomorrow? It would not take more than 15 minutes and would allow us to trouble shoot any potential errors prior to the meetings start.

Thank you,
Savannah

Savannah—

Thanks for reaching out.

I'm taking the liberty of copying Mark Hoffman of my law school's IT staff, who's in a far better position to troubleshoot your HighFive system than am I.

However, I now have another commitment on May 9th that may prevent me from participating. Can you remind me when the webcast is scheduled that day? And will it be available for viewing after-the-fact if I can't join you on the 9th?

Stacey—

The only form you need to sign and return is the “license agreement” in which you agree that the program and your remarks can be taped and preserved for posterity. (It’s probably fine if you simply fill out the form and bring it with you to Oakland next Friday, however.)

All,

We are close to having a full slate for this year's Conference, but need your help!

Next week we will assemble the weekend's schedule of events, at which point we need to expedite completion of the brochure. If you are a wrangler, please review the attached summary chart of the panels and let us know of any final revisions to the Program Title, Description, list of speakers, and advise of any scheduling conflicts for each of the Conference dates (Oct. 19-21). For any panels with speaker confirmations still pending, please reach out and try to secure commitments by next week.

Finally, don't be shy about asking your contacts to join us as a sponsor. We are below 2016 and 2017 sponsorship levels, but can close the gap with a final push. Even if after the brochure deadline, we can still provide sponsor recognition on the website and at the event so keep spreading the word.

Thanks and have a great weekend!

Regards,

Pete Nyquist

Subject: Yosemite Conference: Final Push on Panels, Descriptions and Speakers

Dear Members & Advisors:

We are making great strides in our Yosemite Conference planning efforts, thanks to the exemplary efforts by our Subcommittees and wranglers. We are headed into the final stretch and need to nail down all our panels so that we can finalize our Conference schedule, prepare the brochure, and begin our marketing efforts.

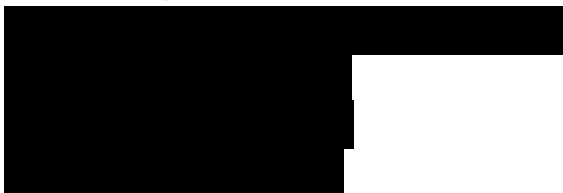

If you have not already done so, please update Jennifer, Ellison and me on the status of your panels. In addition to names and contact info for each confirmed speaker, we need to be made aware of any unavoidable schedule conflicts for Friday, Saturday or Sunday of the Conference. Our preference, of course, is to retain maximum scheduling flexibility.

Thanks in advance and for all your hard work!

Regards,

Pete Nyquist
