Hi there,

Sorry for not being clear. We were thinking we'd file for our group of petitioners since we are the ones who need more time. I'm attaching our draft. Happy to have it be joint, if you prefer or think it will be odd if the US files nothing. But I was thinking the fact that we say everyone consents covers that?

Thanks,
Elaine

Hi Elaine -

Is California planning to circulate a draft motion? If it is going to be joint I need some time to circulate it here first.

Dear counsel,

The Petitioners have conferred. The State and Local Government Petitioners intend to seek an additional 60 days to inform the Court how we would like to proceed with these consolidated cases. Several members of our coalition need additional time for internal discussion and approval processes. The other Petitioners have no objection to this approach and may join our filing or indicate consent to it. If Respondents and Respondent-Intervenors likewise have no objection—and it sounds like the State Respondent-Intervenors do not—we could file an unopposed motion, indicating your consent. And I do not believe anyone else would have to file anything. Does anyone object to this approach?

Thanks,

Hi Michael,

Your email below was forwarded to me. Could you please ensure that future communications about Union of Concerned Scientists or Ohio include representatives for State Petitioners in the former and State Respondent-Intervenors in the latter—specifically, myself and my colleague Caitlan McLoon? There are several other petitioner groups in Union of Concerned Scientists that I think were missing from your email, as well. I've attempted to cover them here.

In answer to your question below, the Petitioners are conferring amongst themselves and with each other. The State Petitioners anticipate being able to propose a response to the order seeking motions to govern early next week.

Best,
Elaine

All,

I am writing to see if anyone has put together a document to file in response to the Court's request that we offer it a suggestion about what to do with this case after the decision in Ohio v. EPA. As intervenors in this case, we defer to a party leading the response. And as Petitioners in the Ohio case, I can tell you that we are seriously considering a cert. petition there. From our perspective, it makes the most sense to continue to hold that case on ice while any further review plays out in Ohio.

Hi there,

Sorry for not being clear. We were thinking we'd file for our group of petitioners since we are the ones who need more time. I'm attaching our draft. Happy to have it be joint, if you prefer or think it will be odd if the US files nothing. But I was thinking the fact that we say everyone consents covers that?

Thanks,
Elaine

Dear counsel,

The Petitioners have conferred. The State and Local Government Petitioners intend to seek an additional 60 days to inform the Court how we would like to proceed with these consolidated cases. Several members of our coalition need additional time for internal discussion and approval processes. The other Petitioners have no objection to this approach and may join our filing or indicate consent to it. If Respondents and Respondent-Intervenors likewise have no objection—and it sounds like the State Respondent-Intervenors do not—we could file an unopposed motion, indicating your consent. And I do not believe anyone else would have to file anything. Does anyone object to this approach?

Counsel:

A couple of additional environmental justice groups intend to move to intervene in support of EPA in these cases. These groups include Center for Community Action and Environmental Justice (CCAEJ) and the Rio Grande International Study Center (RGISC). These groups would share intervenor briefing space with the environmental and health groups that already moved to intervene. We plan to file that motion on Monday, June 10. Accordingly, please let me know by 6pm ET on June 7th your clients' position on the motion and, to the extent relevant, whether you intend to file a response.

Thanks,

Marvin

DC Circuit asks how Chevron's fall could affect Biden car rules

The court also ordered parties to explain how the Supreme Court's decision to block EPA's "good neighbor" rule is relevant to the cases.

BY: LESLEY CLARK, | 07/30/2024 04:16 PM EDT

E&E NEWS PM | A federal appeals court wants to know what impact the demise of the Chevron doctrine could have in two lawsuits over high-profile Biden administration climate rules.

In a short order issued Monday, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit asked parties in lawsuits over vehicle standards from EPA and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to submit briefs on whether the Supreme Court's June ruling in Loper Bright Enterprises v. Raimondo makes a difference to their claims.

The order illustrates the sweeping effect of the high court's decision last month to jettison Chevron, a 40-year-old legal theory that said judges should generally defer to agencies' reasonable interpretations when it comes to uncertainty in federal law.

After Loper Bright was decided, a separate federal appeals court in Louisiana sent one of the Biden administration's more unconventional efforts to tackle climate change back to a lower court. The decision is expected to ripple through other pending lawsuits on a variety of policy matters.

The D.C. Circuit on Monday also asked parties in the vehicle litigation to explain whether the Supreme Court's decision in Ohio v. EPA is relevant to the cases. In Ohio, the justices halted EPA's "good neighbor" rule governing smog-forming pollution that crosses state borders.

That decision, which reached the Supreme Court through its emergency or "shadow" docket, was a preliminary victory for Republican-led states and industry groups that will still need to slug it out in the lower courts over the merits of the EPA rule.

Parties in the auto lawsuits have 21 days to respond to the D.C. Circuit's request.

In one of the lawsuits, conservative critics are challenging EPA's decision to tighten tailpipe emissions standards, arguing that the rules run afoul of West Virginia v. EPA. The 2022 Supreme Court decision said that under the major questions doctrine, EPA needed congressional approval to impose regulations forcing coal-fired plants to switch to renewable sources.

EPA's tailpipe regulation — which applies to vehicles that are already on the road through 2026 — sought to reverse a Trump-era rollback and cut greenhouse gas emissions. Ken Paxton of Texas and 14 other Republican attorneys general say their states would suffer "pocketbook injury" because the rule would reduce oil extraction, and they depend on revenue from fossil fuel development.

The Biden administration has argued that the major questions doctrine does not apply to EPA's car rule because the regulation broke no new legal ground. The D.C. Circuit had appeared skeptical during arguments in September that EPA had overstepped its congressional authority by setting limits on vehicle emissions.

The second case is a consolidated challenge to NHTSA's tailpipe emissions standards for cars built from 2024 through 2026. The D.C. Circuit had appeared more skeptical of the Biden administration's position in the NHTSA case.

The DC Circuit just asked the parties to file supplemental briefs in the challenge to the near term rule by August 19 on: 1) the relevance of the court's decision upholding the CA waiver on standing grounds to the standing of these petitioners to challenge the MY2023-2026 standards; and 2) the relevance of Loper Bright (the case overturning Chevron) to the statutory interpretation issues in the cases.

Hi Howard,

Ex. 5 AC/AWP

I'm sure there are more examples as well.

If you want to know more about any of these programs, let us know.
